Japan through the lens of the Tokyo Olympics

edited by

Barbara Holthus, Isaac Gagné, Wolfram Manzenreiter, Franz Waldenberger

This book uses the 2020 Tokyo Olympics as a lens onto city and country, offering hidden insights and new perspectives on city planning, finance, politics, language, security, education, volunteerism and more. It explains the stakeholders, institutions, citizens and protest groups involved, and features the struggle over Tokyo's extreme summer heat, food standards, diversity, and sexual minorities.

"Take this book along as you ride the trains and explore the city. It will be valuable long after the last medal has been awarded."

--Patricia Steinhoff, University of Hawaii

"Full of fascinating insights and information, it is sure to become a bible for anyone intending to attend (or even just watch) the 2020 Olympics in Tokyo. Definitely a winner."
